Wilmington resident working with local police to help limit opioid exposure

By JESSICA KASPARIAN
 News Correspondent

TEWKSBURY — As first responders risk coming in contact with deadly opioids fentanyl and carfentanyl, the Tewksbury Police Department and surrounding communities purchase substance exposure kits from local business Bennett Noble LLC, formerly A&A Industrial Supply/ALBECO Fasteners, Inc.

Ted Morang Sr., a resident of Wilmington and the owner of Bennet Noble LLC worked with local law enforcement to create custom kits that would protect first responders.

"The Town of Tewksbury came to me about two weeks ago with a document that was presented to them from a law enforcement training council. It indicated to them that they would be giving to each officer a safety kit containing certain items to keep the officer safe if they come in contact with one of the opioids, either fentanyl or carfentanyl," Morang said.

Morang said the process of creating the kit was fast-tracked by headlines in Chelsea, where three police officers were exposed to fentanyl while treating passengers in a minor car crash for overdoses, as reported by The Boston Globe.

"We went back and forth by phone and by email for a few days and while they were pondering, they were considering the quote and how many of these kits they were going to buy, the incident in Chelsea happened where the three officers became ill from having come in contact with fentanyl in a car accident," Morang said. "So, that was the big moment."

The responding officers in

Chelsea had inhaled fentanyl that went airborne in the crash, making it clear that coming in contact with the deadly opioid cannot always be predicted, making a preventative exposure kit a necessity.

The kit itself is made up of four items: a dusk mask, Tyvek suit, safety goggles, and nitrile gloves.

Selectmen talk taxes: too high or just right?

By KRISTA BRESNAHAN
 News Correspondent
 krista@yourtowncrier.com

WILMINGTON — At the August meeting of the Board of Selectmen during public comments, former selectman and current Board of Appeals member Raymond Lepore spoke on topics including free cash and the taxes in town, sparking an in depth discussion on the subjects.

Lepore pointed out that in his work doing Title 5s he asks people if they are moving out of town, why, and where. He has received many answers having to do with taxes.

"I appreciate that Mr. Bendel brought it up a couple of months ago that he would like to curve the taxes in this town. Being on that board myself, I tried and I didn't get anywhere. I even tried for senior citizen discounts and tax easements and I couldn't do it, so I'm here to tell you reality," said Lepore.

In regards to free cash, Lepore said, "(When) we talk about free cash, the last time I heard figures out there I heard 17 plus and growing. I don't know if that's a true statement or not. The first thing I'd like to know is, if we are at 17 million and climbing, I think it should be fair to the public that you state what your intent is with that money. We're just building up a fund and everybody's saying we're climbing up here and our taxes are growing

WORKING GRANDPARENTS MAY BE ELIGIBLE FOR EITC

Working grandparents raising grandchildren should be aware of the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) and correctly claim it if they qualify.

The EITC is a federal income tax credit for workers who don't earn a high income ($53,505 or less for 2016) and meet certain eligibility requirements. Because it's a refundable credit, those who qualify and claim the credit could pay less federal tax, pay no tax or even get a tax refund. The EITC could put an extra $2 or up to $6,269 into a taxpayer's pocket.

Grandparents and other relatives care for millions of children, but are often not aware that they could claim the children under their care for the EITC. A grandparent who is working and has a grandchild who is a qualifying child living with him or her may qualify for the EITC, even if the grandparent is 65 years of age or older. Generally, to be a qualified child for EITC purposes, the grandchild must meet the dependency requirements.

Special rules and restrictions apply if the child's parents or other family members also qualify for the EITC. Details including numerous helpful examples can be found in Publication 596, available on IRS.gov. There are also special rules, described in the publication, for individuals receiving disability benefits and members of the military.

Eligible taxpayers must file a tax return, even if they do not owe any tax or are not required to file. Qualified taxpayers should consider claiming the EITC by filing electronically; through a qualified tax professional; using free community tax help sites; or doing it themselves with IRS Free File.

Pulling for hope: Move a truck, fight cancer

BILLERICA - A unique and fun way to raise money and fight cancer is coming to the area on Sunday, Sept. 17, 2017. The 2nd annual Pull For Hope will take place at 10:30 a.m. that morning at Marshall Middle School 15 Floyd St., Billerica. Teams will test their strength and see who can pull a fire truck 50 feet the fastest.

"All of the money raised will go to the Wilmington-Billerica Relay for Life of 2018," explained Eric Duffy, American Cancer Society Community Development Manager.

Registration is $25 a person. "We hope that everyone will try to raise $100 but that is not required to participate," said Duffy.

Teams will consist of 10-15 people. Local community organizations and town offices are expected to compete.

Detailed timeline of the day will be set closer to the event, but registration check-in will be 10:30 a.m., and the firetruck pulling will start at 11 a.m. Time-slots for each team will be set approximately one week ahead of the event for those who register in advance.

To register a new team (groups of 10-15 people) for the event, participants should go to the American Cancer Society Community Fund Raising page.

If you have questions, please email eric.duffy@cancer.org.

Summer's almost over, so it's time for some good old stories.

On a hot Sunday afternoon in 1964, a few young men went kayaking on the Shaw-sheen River in Ballardvale. A retiree had a canoe & kayak rental business called Miami.

Bobby "Newsbag" Shelley removed his pants in the kayak, so he could go for a dip. His pals, though, had a different idea and dumped the kayak. He managed to get back into the kayak, but his pants went floating downstream.

Late in the afternoon, they returned to the North Wilmington parking lot, where Bobby had left his car, a 57 Plymouth with fins that would fit a jumbo jet. He and a couple of his pals jumped into the car and began racing around the parking lot, banking off a large sand pile. The town always kept sand there for winter sanding.

After a few passes across the edge of the pile, Bobby decided it was time for a frontal assault. He backed his car into the street, hit the gas, and went screaming through the parking lot. The car made it about halfway up the sand pile.

There were several kids nearby, and they went to his rescue, trying to lift the car enough to get it off the sand pile. While that effort was underway, who should show up but Officer Pat Leonard. He asked who owned the car. Bobby, standing there sans pants but with a long-sleeved shirt tied around his waist, said that he did. He started into a story about going kayaking with his friends, and that when they returned to the parking lot, someone had taken his car and put it up on the sand pile. "Where are your pants?" asked Leonard.

History:

Crazy fun in the summertime

Bobby told him about being dumped out of the kayak, and how his pants had last been seen floating downstream.

"Let me see your license," said the officer.

Well, said Bobby, his license was in his wallet, in his pants.

"I think you'd better come down to the station with me," said Officer Leonard.

If you ever hung around with Oley Olson, you were in for some serious drinking. If he didn't think you were drinking fast enough, he'd grab your beer can and hold it up over your face.

On a Sunday morning in 1967, I went to my buddy Ralph's house. He wasn't up, but his mother demanded to know what we'd been doing the night before. I'd been out on a perfectly respectable dinner date but Ralph had been drinking with Oley and

Joe. His mother had come down to the most horrible stink in the laundry room.

Oley had a brand-new 1967 Ford Fairlane 500 XL convertible. It was a beauty, but not so much after the night in question.

It must have been about 2 a.m. when they decided to visit Sciarappa's farm, up on Andover Street. It made no sense whatsoever, but if you'd ever been drinking with Oley, you'd understand. Chasing the pigs around in the slop at 2 a.m. probably seemed like a lot of fun. They invited two little porkers to go for a ride in Oley's once-beautiful car.

Oley drove down to Burlington, where he tied one of the pigs to his boss's front porch. The other one went home with Joe, who was living with his aunt. He opened the cellar door and shoved the pig down the stairs.

The next morning, his aunt heard noises in the cellar. When she opened the door, there was a pig looking back at her. She went outside, opened the bulkhead and let the pig out.

The pig ran loose around Wilmington for about two weeks. Finally the cops picked it up and put it in a dog pen at the station. Eventually it was returned to the Sciarappas. The pig that went to Burlington probably ended up as bacon.

My friend Eddie the mechanic was never happy if the name on the motor matched the name on the hood. He started with a 1957 Chevy pickup. He dropped in a 390 Cadillac engine, which sat on the chassis, secured by a heavy chain. The gear shift was just two steel bars welded to the lugs on the transmission. For first gear, he'd push one bar forward. Then for second, he'd pull that first bar back to neutral and move the second bar back. Third gear would be with the second bar pushed forward.

Nobody ever tried to steal that truck.

A list of his creations would be quite long, so the reader will just have to imagine strange combinations of cars and engines from the 50s and 60s. The combinations were not limited to engines that would easily bolt into place. He would make new motor mounts and other necessary parts to make a motor fit into its new home.

Eddie loved in being the nemesis of a kid who worked in the same gas station. Joe bought a really nice blue 55 Chevy with a 327 engine. Joe liked to pull out of the gas station and burn rubber down the street. One afternoon Eddie greased the tires and Joe found himself going around in circles.

Eddie would pull little tricks like switching plug wires or dropping a small rubber eraser into one socket of the distributor cap. Joe soon caught on, but Eddie had one more trick. He never said what he did, but the car never ran right again. Oh, it ran, but it had no power. Joe sold the car at a loss.

Joe then bought a Plymouth Sport Fury in tough shape. He went to work on it, but made the mistake of asking Eddie what to do. Eddie jumped in and took the motor apart, leaving Joe with a pile of parts. The boss wanted the car out of the garage, so Joe sold it to Eddie, who put it back together.

Eddie found a train whistle in a junkyard. He'd occasionally hook it up to the air compressor in the gas station, which was near a railroad crossing. Then during rush hour, he'd blow the whistle and watch cars stop at the crossing.

Eddie eventually went into business on his own. He rented a bay in a new industrial garage in Billerica. It wasn't long before the floor had a thick coating of grease. Clean was not his strong suit.

He bought a large fork lift truck from a lumber yard, able to lift large heavy objects about 25 feet. He'd show off his toy, putting a car on the roof of the garage.

Sharing shades at Library Eclipse Party

The Wilmington Public Library hosted ... the first ever Eclipse Party out on their front lawn. 500 eclipse viewing glasses were donated and given out to residents on a first come first serve basis days before the event. The library put 25 pair aside. These were shared by parents and their kids. The crowd grew to about 150 as the moon partially obstructed the sun. Cold drinks and snacks were available for all. 16th annual Walk of Hope to benefit ALS

WAKEFIELD — Walkers are signing up for the 16th annual Walk of Hope for ALS, a 3.5-mile walk around Lake Quannapowitt in Wakefield to benefit The Angel Fund for ALS Research. The Walk will be held on Saturday, Sept. 9, 2017. The event begins with registration at 9 a.m. followed by the start of the walk at 11 a.m.

WCVB anchor Maria Stephanos, who serves as Honorary Chairperson of The Angel Fund, will help kick-off the walk.

The Angel Fund for ALS Research is a nonprofit organization dedicated to supporting ALS research at UMass Medical School in Worcester. ALS, more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, is a progressive, always fatal neuromuscular disease which leads to muscle weakness and as it progresses, results in total paralysis and the inability to speak and swallow while the mind and senses remain intact.

Walkers of all abilities are encouraged to participate as individuals or as a team. To register as a walker or to register a team, log-on to The Angel Fund for ALS Research website at www.theangelfund.org or call the organization at 781-245-7070.

Donations to the Angel Fund for ALS Research can also be made online, or can be sent to The Angel Fund, 649 Main Street, Wakefield, MA 01880. All donations should be made payable to The Angel Fund for ALS Research. To assist its walkers, The Angel Fund for ALS Research has joined FirstGiving.com which enables them to create their own webpage to raise money online. Registered walkers can create their page at www.firstgiving.com/angelfund.

In addition to the walk around Lake Quannapowitt, the event includes children's activities and refreshments for all walkers, including sliders generously donated by King's Bowling of Lynnfield.

There are several levels of corporate sponsorship for the Walk of Hope for ALS. Several local businesses have already pledged their support as sponsors of the Walk, including Major Sponsors the Law Office of Nigro, Petepit and Lucas, and The J Group benefiting ALS research, Porcello Law Office and The Savings Bank.

Information about sponsorship opportunities can also be obtained on the website, www.theangelfund.org, or by calling 781-245-7070.

The Angel Fund for ALS Research conducts other fund-raising events throughout the year which, along with individual and corporate donations, have been beneficial in helping make significant strides in ALS research. For a list of upcoming events, visit The Angel Fund for ALS Re-

Letters to the editor

Who represents the Town of Wilmington?

Dear editor
Think about it. Do you say something if you see someone kick a dog in front of you? Someone leave a child in a locked car? Someone struggling to keep their head above water at a beach?

I don't know about you but if I can't physically help then I try to say something to someone who can help resolve the issue at hand.

I write about this due to the fact that residents educated to the issue at hand, in this and surrounding towns are opposed to the proposed Global Truck stop to be built in Wilmington for many various reasons. This opposition is expressed by signage on property, attendance at meetings and through the media.

Besides State Rep. Miceli, only one other elected official has noted his opposition to this proposal. No one else who can help this town and the out of control issues with traffic and development is stepping forward. While selflessly donating their time and energy serving the community in an unpaid capacity is a commendable endeavor, why the silence?

Just who are these town officials representing anyway? Yes the question is being asked, sorry if it hurts feelings, but the citizenry has a right to know what is really going on before coming to conclusions.

There is a school of thought, suspect to this particular case, that the direction of these boards and committees opinions and decisions are dictated by The Team of the former town manager and former chairman of the board of selectmen / town counsel, who were hired by the Global Oil co. to push this through any obstacles or opponents of this proposed project. Both very nice people, who just want to make a buck.

Yes this could be taken as an insulting (sic) slant, devoid of flowery scenarios and elegant adjectives put forth by the proponents proposal, but the fact is in layman's terms this is going to be truck stop, and all that goes with it as such.

If you have ever made a living driving one then you would understand... maybe not for tractor trailers, but straight trucks. The process this Team has taken in pushing this proposal through harkens back suspiciously to a time when this former town selectmen / chairman got re-elected and shortly thereafter, at the very first selectman meeting, resigned to apply to the town council position. His replacement to the board of selectmen voted in and appointed that night was... not the person who came in second in votes, but someone who had not even run for that selectman position. The funny thing about this was it was all done with one particular selectman absent from said meeting.... No waiting till he came back, no "let's discuss this and vote at the next meeting" just hurry up and get someone in that spot. Low and behold who got the town council job? Well well well... But I digress it was a long time ago and the outrage has subsided over time.

It was then and is now, small town politics, being played as a team sport. All legal. Thanks to the Town Crier archives that have been put online it's right there for any citizen to see... and if you go back say 17-18 years you will note that this "team" has been together for quite some time and have had their hand in much of this town's ongoing development.

The neighborhood this project is proposed for and this town needs someone who is a position elected or appointed and help it, to stand up and acknowledge the will of the citizens they represent. This town is out of control with developers chomping at the bit to slide through proposals and build on any spot they can, and there are many on the horizon.

One major issue with this proposal is allowing Global to put in a driveway over a residential zoned area off Lowell St. as denoted on the zoning maps available on the town website. This sets a precedence for future developments, does that matter to anyone?

Building this truck stop in such a busy intersection, across from a densely populated neighborhood is foolish, for so many reasons. What does this say about the town officials and the future of this town when they remain silent in the face of public outcry against this proposal.

As they do not reign supreme power on control of what goes where in the continued development of this town, their voice represents the citizens. There are means of control on the issues of development. Their silence on this proposal is deafening. Are they representing the Town or the Team?

Newspapers are first with the news

By PAUL ANDREWS
Mass. Ass'n. of School Superintendents
Chairman of the Board of Winchester Hospital

My first series of comments is about the importance of our newspapers for which I am obviously biased. Each time I read a story in the Boston or local press I find the facts, stated clearly, on issues of major importance, which are often followed by many television or other social media stories lacking the "full" details of the prior printed story.

Again, often stories in our newspapers seem to be the guiding highlights for later news on the media. Read the Boston press in the morning and they will give you the major stories of the noon newscasts. While I understand that there is only so much news, I take great confidence in the newspaper coverage at the national, state and local levels, as these stories have been checked by reporters and editors giving us the real story or as much as can be reported.

Texas storm coverage

What I find disconcerting however was the use this past week of our national news broadcasts showing clips of storm coverage on the Texas coast from prior storms before the current storm was raising turf on the coast. What does this prove? If the point is that this could happen, I think people are smart enough to know this and will hopefully take heed except those who want to ride out a storm.

For two days, file footage of flooded streets and howling winds were shown before the first drop of rain came from the sky over Texas, which had little or no purpose in my mind. Our thoughts and prayers go out to the folks impacted by this storm as we take so much for granted.

Irish border — possible trouble again

Britain's vote to quit the European Union has returned for some heated concern. While Northern Ireland is a part of the United Kingdom, Ireland has been independent since 1921. This action could bring back some major border activities again and the financial markets will be separate. The guard post on the border of Northern Ireland could be once again manifesting active guards and search procedures that are not very comfortable.

Over a decade ago, my wife and I were guests of a family in County Moynihan, which were some of the greatest days of my life, as we developed some great friends of a real Irish family and for me "Little John" as he was called by his own family.

One day Little John took me to the biggest milk farm I have ever seen, where in a corner of a huge pasture of Irish land, cows would come into the barn for milking totally the modern way with technology doing the work and out of the barn the cow would head back to pasture.

In some way, Little John tried to explain the differences to me of the black and brown cows in a most confusing manner. Just to express my confusion, I commented, "so you are saying the black cows give milk and the brown cows give cream, right?" as John laughed so loud others wanted to know what was going on. Little John commented, "the Yank here thinks black cows give milk and brown cows give cream" as they all laughed at my comment.

I mentioned Little John, as one morning he asked if I could go with him to Northern Ireland as he wanted to get some groceries. Having never been to Northern Ireland, I thought it would be interesting. On the journey we came to a guard house with military checking all the cars going across the border. Little John commented, don't be worried, everything will be fine. He pulls up to the military and tells them he was bringing his friend to Northern Ireland. No checking of our trunk was done with one of the soldiers commenting, "remember Little John to bring back the papers." This was my first experience to the so called "troubles" that all talked about in Ireland. We hate to see added troubles come to Northern Ireland and Ireland itself.

Working predictions

Some national meetings of looking at the "Future of Work" are predicting that many will be rendered unemployable by robots and artificial intelligence with many young people heading towards a limited number of high-income or hi-tech jobs going to the well educated while many will be offered opportunities making low incomes service or part time jobs without benefits.

The experts working in this area feel that "between nine and 20 percent of today's jobs are threatened by technology and robots in the years ahead. A report out of London estimates that this percentage could go to 47 percent over the next 20 years.

JUST A NOTE: Thank you for honoring me by taking the time to read this column and feel free to contact me at andrews@massupt.org

Reading Art Association demonstration on Sept. 13

READING — Reading Art Association will be holding their first demonstration of the year on Wednesday, Sept. 13, 2017 at 7:30 p.m. All demonstrations are held at the First Congregational Church in Reading. Entrance to Guild Hall where the demos are held is the middle side door on Sanborn Street.

Chasing the light best describes Arnie Casavant's plein air paintings. "The natural elements and my paints, combine to reward me with lasting memories."

Arnie attended UMass, Dartmouth, on the G.I. bill. Before retiring he served as an art instructor at Oliver Ames High School in Easton, Massachusetts for 27 years and was the chairperson of the art department for the last few years he was there.

Arnie prefers to paint on location in oils, either early morning or late in the day as the sun interacts dramatically with the subject matter.

He has exhibited his work at myriad locations and was a partner in Gallery 31 on Cape Cod in Orleans, Massachusetts. Arnie studied under the direction of accomplished landscape painters David Lussier, William St. George and nationally recognized Yellow Barn Gallery director Walt Bartman.

This should be an informative and interesting night so come and bring your friends. Refreshments will be served.

Visit historical CONCORD

By PAIGE IMPINK
News Correspondent

paige@yourtowncrier.com

Massachusetts is so rich with colonial history. The cradle of the nation is right in our backyard. Concord, one of the most significant towns in that history, is a lovely place to visit, not only for its aesthetic but for the myriad things there are to do and see, providing for itineraries that can fill a morning, afternoon or entire day.

Start your day out at the Concord Museum. The museum began as a collection of items which recognized the significance of Concord in history through the vision of Cummings Davis, a collector, in 1860. Over the years the museum has evolved its collections and outreach to the community.

Whether it is highlighting the North Bridge, the visit of the Marquis de Lafayette, or the Battle of Lexington and Concord, the museum will ring familiar with children who have learned about the revolutionary war recently, or jog your own memory of history.

Take advantage of the scavenger hunt and other games and activities as you work your way around the building. Through a capital campaign, the museum is constructing a large addition to offer more hands-on activities and classrooms to enhance the experience. The museum was reasonably priced and not crowded. Plan for an hour or so, something to do at the start of the day.

Moving on to the center of town, there is plenty of metered and unmetered parking. Investigate the Sleepy Hollow Cemetery and

Author's Ridge. Grouped together are the resting places of Henry David Thoreau, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Ralph Waldo Emerson, and Louisa May Alcott among others. It is a nice walk and a bit humbling to read the names of historical greats. Concord is busy though, so the walk is not as peaceful as the Mount Auburn or Cambridge Cemeteries. Thoreau never imagined this.

There are several eateries in Concord center but we chose a casual place, opting to eat outside on picnic tables. The Main Street Café offered very fresh and delicious tacos. We sat at picnic tables near the parking lot so the spot was low on ambiance, but the kid and dog friendly spot was a hit.

The North Bridge visitor center is a good stop. Run by the National Park Service, this is the site of the bridge battle of 1775. There is an eight mile walk that extends to the Minute Man Visitor Center and runs through Concord center and the bridge. You'd have to do some good planning for that but it is also a popular bike route.

Not to be skipped is Walden Pond, which offers paths that ring the water for walking and has become a very popular place for swimming. There is a fee and it does get quite crowded on warm days and weekends. As the temperatures cool and the leaves start to turn, consider Concord for a visit and soak in the history of the area.

Data-Driven Justice partners gather for second convening

MEDFORD — Members of the Middlesex County Data-Driven Justice (DDJ) Initiative gathered in Medford on Thursday, Aug. 10, to discuss efforts to effectively integrate public safety and emergency services data to create better outcomes for those suffering from mental health and substance use disorders.

The DDJ Initiative was initially launched last summer by the White House, with a goal of using data to break the cycle of incarceration for those suffering from mental illness and substance use disorders. Locally, the Middlesex Sheriff's Office and more than 20 municipal police departments signed on to the initiative last fall and have been working with the Laura and John Arnold Foundation and National Association of Counties (NACo) since January to identify resources to support local efforts.

"Day-in and day-out our first responders and emergency service providers are interacting with individuals in crisis. One individual may be a perpetrator, victim and witness in multiple cases across differing communities," said Middlesex Sheriff Peter J. Koutoujian. "By sharing data across jurisdictions, and systems, we can not only break the cycle of incarceration for local residents, but more importantly help address the underlying behavioral health issues which are leading to these interactions with law enforcement and emergency service providers."

Last week's meeting was attended by more than two dozen members of law enforcement (including 12 chief executives), as well as representatives of the Laura and John Arnold Foundation, state agencies, the Massachusetts League of Community Health Centers and EMS providers. The meeting also included the first demonstration of a secure data integration and sharing platform under construction for use within Middlesex County.

"We are thrilled by the commitment to Data-Driven Justice from Sheriff Koutoujian and Police Chiefs across Middlesex County," said Lynn Overmann, Vice President of Data-Driven Justice at the Laura and John Arnold Foundation. "By using data to help connect people struggling with opioid use and mental illness to effective treatment in the community, Middlesex law enforcement leaders will serve as a model for jurisdictions across the country."

Last week's convening was the second gathering of DDJ partners. The first was held in December at the Middlesex Sheriff's Office Training Academy in Chelmsford. The Middlesex County DDJ Initiative is comprised of the

Middlesex Sheriff's Office and the Acton, Arlington, Ashland, Bedford, Billerica, Buxton, Burlington, Cambridge, Carlisle, Chelmsford, Concord, Dracut, Lowell, Marlborough, North Reading, Reading, Somerville, Tewks-

bury, Townsend, Wakefield and Watertown Police Departments. The Holliston, Hopkinton and Sherborn Police Departments will also participate through and ongoing collaboration with the Ashland Police Department.

RMLD ribbon cutting ceremony for new distributed generator

READING — On Thursday, Aug. 17, 2017, Reading Municipal Light Department (RMLD) held a ribbon cutting ceremony to commemorate the completion of a new distributed generator located at its North Reading substation. The unit is powered by natural gas and has the capacity to produce 2.5 megawatts of electricity to support "shredding the peak."

The new generator was installed to reduce peak demand, and is expected to help lower future transmission and capacity costs related to the purchase of wholesale electricity. Transmission and capacity costs are determined by our total system load during critical peak times when the electrical grid is most stressed, typically during the summer from 2 p.m. - 7 p.m.

Based on current transmission and capacity costs, the savings for this year is estimated at $200,000 - $400,000; these cost savings are a direct benefit to RMLD customers.

This unit is a form of distributed generation, which is technology that generates electricity near where it is used. RMLD's Solar Choice program is another example of distributed generation technology within RMLD's service area. To learn more about RMLD's Solar Choice Program, visit <http://www.rmld.com/customer-service/pages/solar-choice-program>.

RMLD's ongoing Shred the Peak education program, which launched in 2016, is another initiative to address rising wholesale costs related to peak usage. The program seeks to educate customers about how peaks impact future costs, and encourages customers to conserve electricity when peaks are predicted. RMLD communicates peak predictions through Shred the Peak Alerts sent out via email (sign up by visiting <http://bit.ly/shredthepeaksignup>) and Twitter (@ReadingLight).

To learn more about RMLD's Shred the Peak initiative and how to conserve electricity, please visit <http://www.rmld.com/save-energy-money/pages/shred-the-peak>.

RMLD would like to recognize and thank the following parties for their contribution to and support of the Distributed Generator Project: The Town of North Reading; Tim Zanelli Excavating, general contractor; Milton CAT, generator manufacturer; PLM Electric Power Engineering Consultants; Rubin and Rudman, Attorneys at Law; National Grid, natural gas supplier; Bay State Piping Company, Inc., contractor; TRI-MONT Engineering Co.; and Epsilon Associates, environmental consultants.

Ranked #18 in Apparel Magazine

UniFirst named one of the top apparel companies

WILMINGTON — UniFirst Corporation, a leading supplier and servicer of uniforms, workwear, and protective clothing throughout North America, has been named No. 18 in America's top 50 apparel companies by Apparel magazine, a leading international resource for the global apparel industry. This is the 11th consecutive year the company was recognized by the magazine.

To be eligible, public companies had to record at least $100 million in annual sales; rankings were based on overall performance and financial management.

UniFirst appears on the top 50 apparel companies list alongside some of America's most popular clothing companies including Michael Kors (No. 1), TJX Companies (No. 19), American Eagle Outfitters (No. 24), Gap (No. 29), and Under Armour (No. 30).

Adam Soreff, UniFirst's director of marketing and communications, says that UniFirst's annual success is a great achievement given today's ongoing market and competitive challenges.

"We're all extremely proud of our team's efforts throughout the U.S. and Canada to deliver service satisfaction to our 300,000 business customers and maintain a steady course for continuous growth year after year."

He continued, "So much of what we do revolves around our strong customer relationships and the commitment we have companywide to providing exceptional customer service in an ever-changing market."

"UniFirst continues to rank highly on our top 50 list year after year," says Jordan Speer, Apparel magazine editor-in-chief. "This reflects the organization's ability to perform financially as a result of focusing on customer needs and adapting to challenges in the marketplace."

The Apparel magazine honor coincides with other recent honors for UniFirst — being named to Selling Power magazine's "Best Companies to Sell For" list and Florida Trend magazine's "Best Companies To Work For" list.

here, school systems are going here and the cash is going up, (so) where are we headed?"

He also stated that it is going to be necessary to get creative when it comes to the growth in houses.

"We've already got, probably, provisions coming, that we permitted. In the next coming year, we've got many more coming, so what do I mean by get in on the act? I would say duplexes, anything duplexes and above, anything that's, say, commercial property, putting a 10,000 square foot addition or 10,000 square foot new.

"Condos and apartments, let's bring in a tax: two percent of the value of each unit and even on apartments. Why am I saying apartments? Because in time you can turn the apartments over to condos. Take the two percent and put it back into wherever you want it. You want to put it into municipalities, DPW funds, I see the roads in town, three years time, we're hot topping and they're deteriorating because of traffic," he said.

After hearing what Lepore said, Selectman Gregory Bendel thanked him for bringing his knowledge to the board and said on the topic of taxes, "I appreciate you using the words being creative. I think that's what we need to do, (because) if you recall a few months back I did ask at a public meeting for the manager to put on a future agenda about spending. I know, and you know, that all of us, if there was a magic wand up here and we could wave it we would lower taxes. I would love to do that, but we can't do that. What we can do is try to curve spending and maybe take a good look at how much we're spending going forward in creative ways, so I agree with you there."

On free cash, Bendel noted that is a term he has struggled with since being on the board and prefers to refer to it as taxpayer's cash because it is taxpayer dollars.

"I don't like the term free cash. I prefer taxpayers cash, and I do struggle with it. I struggle with why we can't spend on smaller items. I don't like going to Town Meeting and asking for short money from people when we have all that money. I agree, and I struggle with that and I've been public about that. I've talked to the manager about that, and I look forward to continuing that discussion. I know there are others that don't see it that way, and I respect that, but it's something I grapple with," he said.

Selectman Chair Michael Champoux noted that he appreciated the idea of creative taxation on developments and rental units and will take it under advisement and explore how that may work.

Further in regards to taxation, he stated, "I enjoy a tremendous amount of equity in a property that I purchased 20 years ago, that equity serves me in my future in terms of retirement or however I choose to use that profit, if you will, the equity in my home. That's a good thing, that speaks directly to Wilmington as a very desirable place to live. People want to come here, people want to live here, and because of that the property, supply and demand, that's what's driven the cost of our property up.

"I've heard people saying it's too expensive to live here; well, it's expensive to live here because we're such a darn good community. That translates to a higher tax bill, not necessarily a higher tax rate, but because your property is worth more you end up paying more taxes, so 14 percent of a larger number is a larger number.

"People get a larger tax bill in the mail and say 'oh, my taxes went up,' well, so did your property value, so congratulations. I think we should be enjoying our higher property values."

He also stated, "That said, it does put people, younger folks who want to buy into our community and older folks who want to stay in our community but not live in a large house and not pay those high taxes, it does put those people in a really challenging position, and I respect that. I acknowledge it, and that really speaks to why I think it's important for us as a community to strategically and mindfully and carefully look at expanding and diversifying our housing stock, which we've started to do.

"We've seen some apartment complexes and some multi-family complexes go in. So many folks lament, 'we don't want multi-family complexes in town,' but these types of developments, if they're done tastefully and in the fabric of our community, that affords younger folks and older folks a place to come to Wilmington or stay in Wilmington in an affordable manner."

With regards to free cash, Champoux acknowledged that it is important and could be used for several different reasons such as boosting the town's bond ratings, allowing for the town to be able to borrow at an advantageous rate, and putting the town in a position to acquire property and other things that they would have to pay higher for without the account.

Because of the free cash account, "when the economic downturn of 2008 or so happened and revenues just weren't there, in order for the town to continue to provide the services that the residents deserve and feel that they've paid for, the town was able to tap into those operational reserves, the free cash account, and not lay off people in town hall, not lay off people at the public safety building, and continue to provide the services, continue to plow. We had to deplete some of the account, but the account was there and it was there specifically for that reason," stated Champoux as another reason.

"I am a taxpayer so that's my number one concern here. We do have to get creative to help everyone stay in town, and I stated earlier, I want my son and daughters to stay in town and my in-laws to stay in town. I was fortunate enough 10 years ago to add on to my house so my in-laws could stay in town, because they were looking elsewhere and then we came up with that idea to add onto the house," said Selectman Ed Loud.

"And yes, the chairman just mentioned it, we all enjoy our houses appreciating, because Wilmington is a desirable town to live in, the taxes are going up, but think about the services that this town is getting: no one in town pays for sports, we have a beautiful park in the middle of the town at Yentile Park that is just getting rave reviews from everybody in town, we've got a beautiful new high school, about 10-12 years ago we built a middle school. We have some great things that us taxpayers don't mind paying for from time to time," he continued.

Loud also noted that he, as well, likes the idea of possibly taxing future developers.

Town Manager Jeffrey Hull pointed out that there is no doubt that taxes have consistently gone up, but looking at surrounding towns such as North Reading, Reading, Tewksbury, Middleton, Wakefield, Billerica, Andover, and North Andover, they are all expensive and have had increases in their taxes as well because eastern Massachusetts is a desirable place to live with easy access to both Boston and the highways.

In terms of free cash, Hull stated, "I think any community strives to be able to put money aside and have it available for the rainy day event, like Selectman Champoux talked about, and believe me, it will rain again. We went from over $9 million in free cash in 2003 or 2004 down to $3 million, so $6 million were taken out of that fund to keep services and avoid fees, to keep people employed, to keep offering services. It's not a question of if, it's a question of when that next downturn is going to happen."

Hull also noted that money from free cash is used to help pay for town liabilities such as the town pension liability which is $78 million to be paid statutorily by either 2034 or 2035, the town's health insurance which is $119 million at the moment and Hull expects that it will grow, and liabilities regarding town facilities, so money is set aside to offset liabilities such as these.

"We could avoid having to deal with those and hope somebody down the line has some wizardry and they can address that, but I don't think that's the responsible thing to do, so from my perspective having a, what I refer to as available funds or free cash balance, is appropriate," he said.

Wilmington's Morang at forefront in helping protect police from opioid exposure

"What they liked about what we did is we put it into a kit, enabling them to pass out a kit to each officer so they know that the officer has it and the officer keeps it in his duty bag, which they carry to and from work everyday and put it in their cruiser that they're assigned to and off they go," Morang said.

Morang points out that he did not invent any of the products used in the kit, but police departments appreciate the easy access officers have to all the equipment they need while responding to a scene where drug exposure is a risk.

"My thought is always, at 2 o'clock in the morning on Route 38 when a police officer is confronted with a situation like this, he needs to act fast, so he needs to know exactly where these items are going to be and how they're going to be laid out in the package, how he can rip it open, put these things on, and do what he needs to do to protect himself," Morang said.

Bennet Noble LLC has an influx of customers right now and employees are proud to be supplying the kits to local police departments at a fast rate.

"Police officers have to do this, have to encounter this," Morang said. "Tewksbury came to us with a list, we met or exceeded their expectations, put it together in a compact kit for a very, very inexpensive price and they're going to be able to refill these, get new kits, and we're doing it all very quickly. If we get an order today, the department will likely have their inventory tomorrow."

5K to benefit Brady's Foundation a complete success

By DAN ZIMMERMAN
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com

WILMINGTON -- As both state and federal agencies seek the means to stem the raging tide of addiction sweeping across the country, there are also smaller organizations making meaningful contributions to this important cause.

Brady's Foundation, for instance, was established to carry out its mission, "To help families who are affected by addiction and to bring wellness to those who are struggling."

The Foundation, which honors the late Tim Brady of Wilmington, who lost his life to substance use disorder in 2016, employs a number of fundraising methods toward this goal, including the "Run for Recovery, Walk for Wellness 5K Family Event."

This year's inaugural edition was held Sunday, August 27th on the Wilmington Town Common and according to the Foundation's executive director Renee Marcou, was a resounding achievement.

"I was simply blown away by the results today," she said. "We were hoping to draw a hundred entries and easily doubled that. Today's event was a great success."

The wound of loss following the tragic death of Tim Brady 16 months ago is still healing for Renee Marcou,

On Sunday, the first 'Run For Recovery 5K' event was held and had tremendous success, including many competitors trying to get a leg up after the gun went off. (photo by JoeBrownphotos.com).

his close friend for years, but from that loss she has derived the inspiration to ensure his memory lives on and impacts others. She is a driven individual and will leave no stone unturned in her efforts to provide for other families affected by the growing scourge of addiction.

"Our hope is to open a wellness center in Wilmington this year," shared Marcou. "There are a few treatment centers, homes, and other resources available in the general area but there's room for more. We'll put the proceeds of today's race and other fundraisers toward opening the doors of the Mind Body Spirit Recovery and Wellness Center here in Wilmington."

The noteworthy purpose alone was enough to draw scores of participants but organizers sweetened the pot with a bevy of amenities. Along with furnishing awards and electronically-recorded results by Yankee Timing, Marcou and her energetic crew added a DJ for pre-and post-race entertainment and announcements, giveaways, raffles, refreshments, and an activity-filled post-race celebration. And, of course, an event of this scope cannot thrive without loyal volunteers.

"The reason this race is a success is entirely because of the enthusiasm and dedication of our volunteers," said Marcou. "They're strong-willed, knowledgeable, and they've been devoted."

Tutu and all, Belding wins race

By DAN ZIMMERMAN

sports@yourtowncrier.com

WILMINGTON -- Don't let the fact that he was wearing a pink tutu fool you - this guy can run, and run fast.

Last Sunday morning, Wilmington's Jesse Belding led 140 finishers across the line of the inaugural Run for Recovery 5K road race. He polished off the event in a time of 18:15, easily outpacing the second place finisher by 1:53.

Belding, 28, obviously possesses natural ability because his training regimen does not translate into a 5:53 per-mile pace.

"I work a lot of hours," said Belding, who is currently employed in the irrigation business. "Sometimes, I only have the means to squeeze in a three-mile workout here or there. Typically, I'll try to put in an average of twenty-miles weekly."

Belding, who ran the one-mile and two-mile distance events for the Wilmington High School track team some ten years ago, admittedly "didn't care for it much." And after school, while he continued to put in the mileage, there were stretches of time when he didn't run at all. But then, several years ago, he got serious about it and picked up the pace, so to speak. Around that time, he also gained entry, via lottery, to the marquis marathon event.

"I did earn an entry to the New York Marathon," Belding said, "but that was the year the race was canceled."

Belding was referring to 2012, when then-Mayor Michael Bloomberg disappointed 47,500 athletes from all around the world by canceling the event due to devastating storms that had left 41 dead and much of NYC without power.

For now, Belding seems content to run the hometown events and after his first win at the Run to Recovery 5K, might be inspired to add to his distance running and racing resume.

"Before today, I believe my personal record was 19:23," he recalled. "I'm very pleased with my finishing time today."

On his arm was written the name, "Valerie," in large block letters. When asked, he said, "That's my sister - she's in recovery and as we speak, doing very well. I ran for her today."

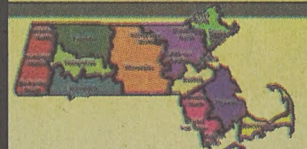

Oh, and the pink tutu?

"That was for fun and nothing more," said Belding. "I wore it to make people laugh a little and raise their spirits. I think I succeeded."

Wilmington Pop Warner kicks off another season

The last for longtime President Deb Smith; Joe McCauley most likely to take over

By JOE QUILTY
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com
WILMINGTON -- For the past 15 years, Deb Smith has been the fixture of the Wilmington Pop Warner program. She announced earlier this year, that this would be her last season as league president. With numbers dwindling, concerns about concussions and overall safety of players surrounding the game across the country, the question here in town is who will replace Smith, and will the program that's well over 50-years of existence continue?

"Deb's been a staple for this program for the past fifteen years," said veteran coach and the League's Football Director, Joe McCauley. "As Deb leaves, we have to transition to a new group of people that want to run Wilmington Pop

Warner. Deb will leave a legacy behind her.

"For those of us that are on the (league's) board (of directors) and want to stay with the program have to follow in a lot of the footsteps that she made and continue to bring Wilmington Pop Warner into the future."

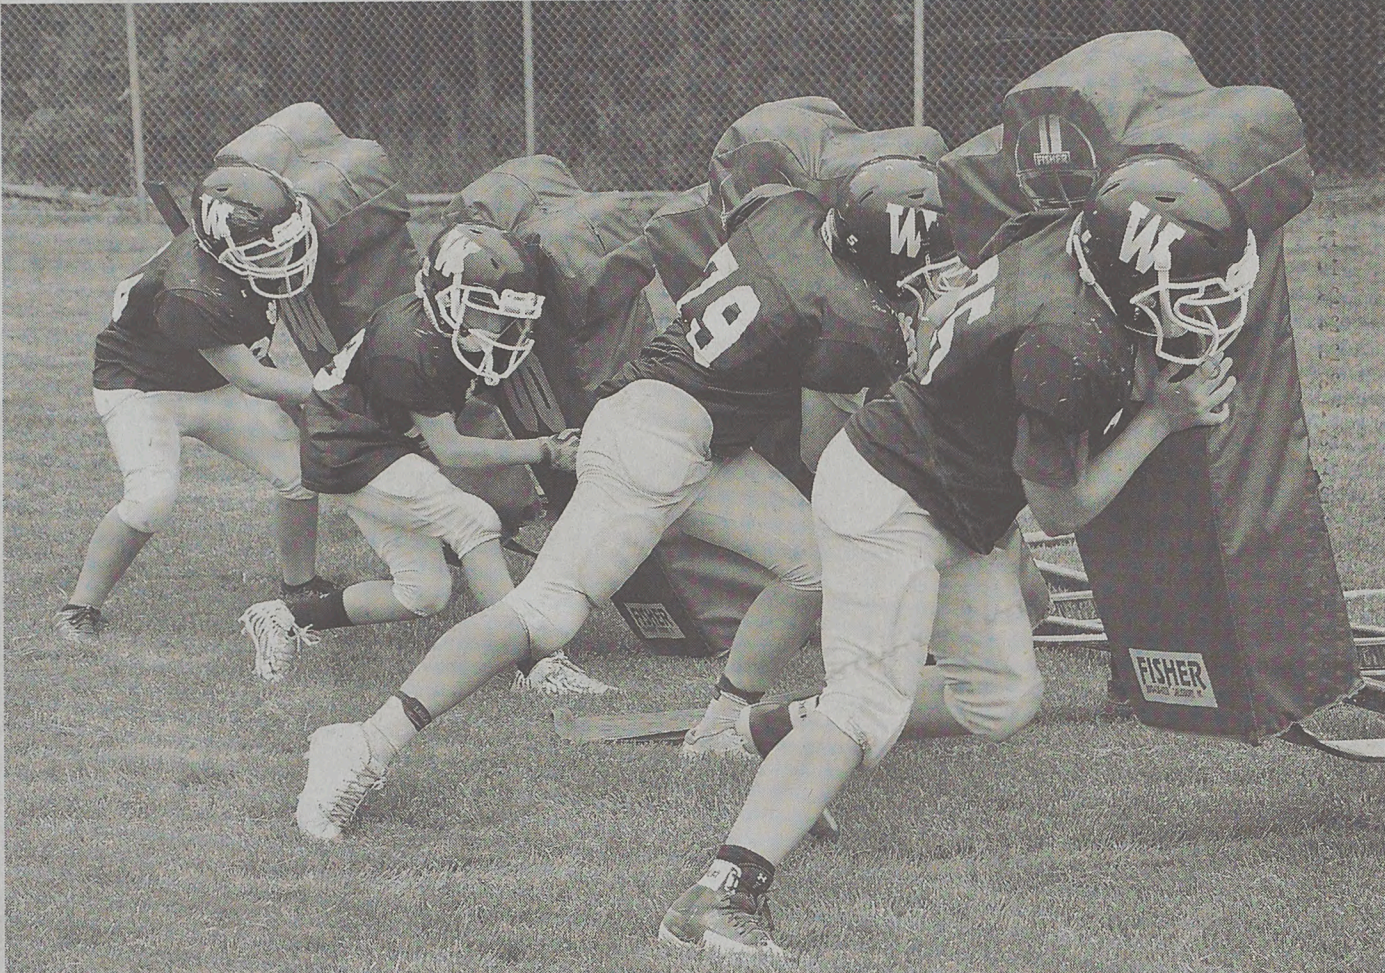

Smith said that she believes McCauley, who currently coaches the 'B' team, will be the one who will take over the responsibilities. He was asked that question Tuesday night during practice at the Robert Palmer Park field at the Glen Road complex.

"I'm excited about possibly becoming the next president of WPW," said McCauley. "I've been the football director for the past five years. Right now I work side-by-side with Deb for the past couple years and really worked with her and kept the program running. I'd be excited for this program whether I'm running it or if another board member is running it. We just want to keep it going."

Smith has worked incredibly hard as a volunteer over the last 15 years, between coaching multiple national championship cheerleading teams, helping to raise $40,000 which has been given out in scholarships for graduating WHS seniors, and then being the League President.

During the last few years, Smith has seen a drop-off in numbers with the program, which is a major concern no matter who is the League President going forward.

"Football is just not very popular right now," Smith told the Crier back in June.

"It's really difficult and there's not a lot of kids who want to play. That just breaks my heart. I have concern for the future of football in Wilmington."

"For some reason, parents think that their kids can play flag football through eighth grade and then just jump onto the high school team and unless you are a phenomenal athlete, it doesn't work that way. It just doesn't work that way."

This season, there's 80 football players and 60 cheerleaders involved in the program. The football teams are now in its third year competing in Division 3.

That means they're no longer setting teams with similar weight classes, they set up teams by age. McCauley said that he's happy for the change of division because it makes things more competitive. The former way could have fifth graders that weighed the same as most seventh graders on the same team, but that wasn't quite fair because the seventh graders have had two years of more experience.

McCauley went on to say that should he become the new president, he's not anticipating drastic changes to the program. He just wants to keep the gears running. "There will be no drastic changes," he said. "Deb's done a wonderful job. Years and years she's built on it."

"I can't even imagine what it would be like without her. If you talk to her she'd tell you that everyone like a kid to her. If you look around the field you'll see former Wilmington High kids that used to play in Wilmington Pop Warner and they're back to coach the kids now."

Lesperance giving back to WPW Program

By JOE QUILTY
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com
WILMINGTON -- Andy

Lesperance grew up here in town and went through the Wilmington Pop Warner system as a player. And today he is giving back to the organization that taught him about the game he enjoys as the new head coach of the E

Team.

"I love football and ever since I stopped playing, it's been something that I miss being a part of," he said during Tuesday night's practice down at the Glen Road Field complex. "It's nice to give back to a program that has given me so much. It's just dealing with the difference of dealing with what you remember as a kid and how it 'really' was. So in a lot of ways it's a lot."

Back when Lesperance was a member of the E Team during his playing days, he said his coach at the time Cliff Lord, ended up being his favorite throughout his youth days.

"I was a bit of a space cadet so he'd always send me on laps because I wasn't paying attention," said Lesperance, while chuckling. "He would always tell me that I needed to listen."

And that worked because Lesperance got his act together and followed through with playing football instead of missing out on learning at practice by running around the field as punishment. Sometimes when he would run laps he would run past his mother and that's how she knew he wasn't paying attention to the coach.

That early discipline really helped Lesperance. The following year as a member of the 'D' Team, he remembers the entire team learning the game and improving from the start of the season to the very end, something he hopes happens with his current E Team.

"That year there were two D teams and both teams made it to the playoffs," he recalled. "I remember playing the other Wilmington team and it was a 'dog fight'. My best friend and next door neighbor was on the other team. It was a fun game that we ended up winning so I think that's why I thought it was fun."

Lesperance continued to play football throughout high school, as well as being a four-year member of the wrestling team. He graduated in 2015 and went on to serve the country in the Marines as a Radio Operator. His responsibility was to "provide basic communications between different companies to track movement and report that back to headquarters."

Now as a Pop Warner coach, Lesperance is going to need those communication skills and so far he has displayed a great relationship with his young players.

"Andy has gone through the WPW program and is back as a coach," said League President Deb Smith. "He has a great outlook."

Added B Team coach Joe McCauley, "It's a real testament to the program to see former players giving back. Not many people fully understand the commitment our coaches give and the hours spent preparing at home and at the field. On top of that Andy works a full time job and is a member of the reserves. It is easy for our youngest players to look up to him as an athlete, coach and a role model."

Today's numbers in WPW are a lot smaller than when Lesperance played but despite that the outlook of every kid putting the pads on for the first time remains the same.

"At that young age everyone thinks they're the next Peyton Manning," he said.

But now as a coach he knows what the kids' mindsets are and what he should really be teaching and expecting of them.

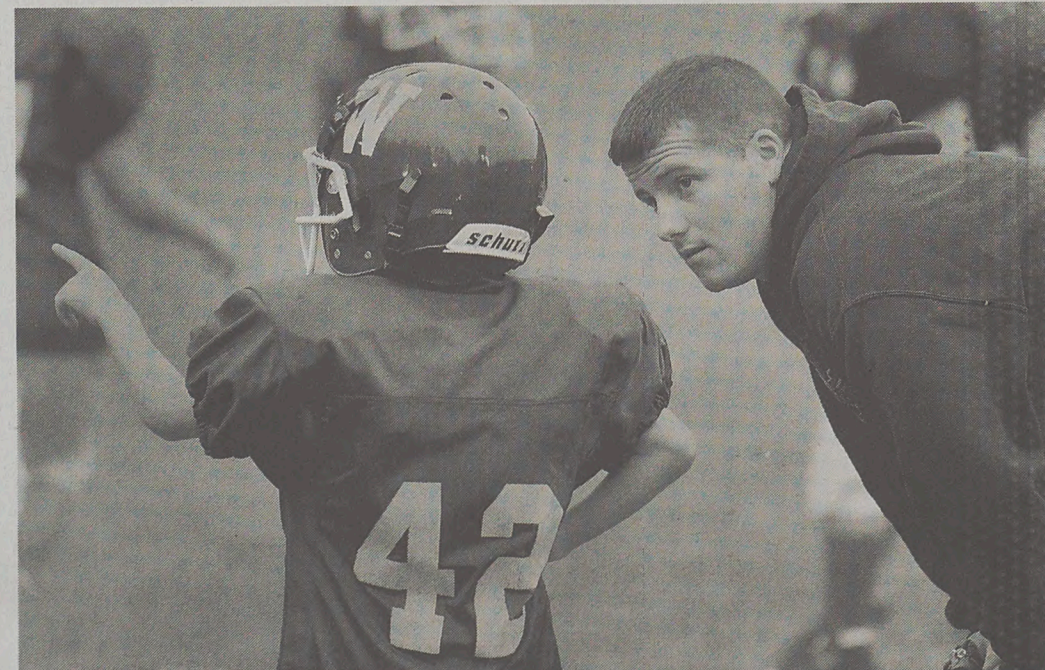

"I don't think there's any other sport out there like football. I owe my childhood to this program," Lesperance said humbly. "I want every kid to love football as much as I do."

5K to benefit Brady's Foundation a complete success

devoted throughout the process. I also have to pay tribute to the local businesses and resource centers. They were so generous, providing food, raffle prizes, and most importantly, their precious time."

Marcou, also a singer-songwriter, kicked off the festivities by belting out a stunning rendition of Our National Anthem. Moments later, under picture-perfect conditions, scores of runners and walkers bolted from a driveway adjacent to Wilmington High School and began to make their way along a gently rolling course from Route 62 North to Wildwood Street, then Woburn Street, followed by Federal Street, and finally, Middlesex Avenue to the finish line adjacent to the Town Common.

First to cross was Wilmington's own Jesse Belding in a time of 18:15. The 28 year-old, who ran distance events for the Wildcats track team roughly a decade ago, not only improved his personal best at the 5K distance by a full minute, he also outdistanced his nearest pursuer by nearly two minutes.

Wilmington's Owen Gurette, 14, sprinted across in a time of 20:08 to take second place while third overall was claimed by Tewksbury's Trish Bourne with a time of 20:31.

"I'm currently training for the Cape Cod Marathon in October," said Bourne who owns an enviable 3:19 best at that distance. "Today's race had extra meaning for me. I lost a brother to addiction. I had him on my mind during the entire 3.1-miles."

Third place male finisher was 17-year-old Adam Doucette, also from Wilmington, in a time of 21:25.

Of the 140 official finishers, 50 were from Wilmington and Tewksbury.

The top ten male finishers from Wilmington included Belding, Gurette, Doucette, Dillon Greenhalsh (5th, 21:35), Will Doucette (7th, 23:07), Bill Lovell (9th, 23:17), Bradford Jackson (19th, 27:51), Mason Rosner (23rd, 29:11), David Dynan (24th, 29:12) and Beckett Rosner (25th, 29:30).

The top ten female finishers from Wilmington included: Jen Bolanos (14th, 23:59), Sarah Atwater (15th, 26:46), Shannon Minghella (27th, 30:10), Diana Doucette (30th, 31:41), Jennifer Ragsdale (31st, 31:50), Jenn Helmer (34th, 32:02), Pamela Cirame (41st, 33:42), Jennifer Tassone (45th, 34:35), Linda Riley (46th, 35:01) and Sarah Cirame (49th, 36:27).

Recovering addict Ross continues to make giant strides

By DAN ZIMMERMAN Sports Correspondent
sports@yourtowncrier.com

WILMINGTON -- During last Sunday's inaugural Run to Recovery 5K, Race Director Renee Marcou had arranged for a number of tables to ring the Wilmington Town Common. Several featured representatives attached to area programs related to the Brady Foundation and its important cause, "to help families who are affected by addiction and to bring wellness to those who are struggling."

At one table, in particular, Evan Ross proved to be an articulate spokesperson for Weymouth's Ocean House, which houses as many as sixteen residents, each working through a 12-step program toward "sober living" and "freedom from addiction."

Ross, a close friend of Marcou, was pleased that she invited him to take part in her event and distribute flyers telling the story of Ocean House of Weymouth. He was also very forthcoming with his own personal story.

"I'm a recovering drug addict," he bluntly began, pointing out that admitting to a problem is key. "The reason I'm here today is because I'm in recovery. I struggled with addiction for 12-years, since I was 15. I was in-and-out of detox facilities, as well as jails. There were times when I was homeless. I hurt my family."

As Ross spoke, race participants began to gather at the starting line. Many people were running in this event to honor a friend or family member in recovery, like Ross.

"In my case, there wasn't a particular event that triggered it," he answered when asked why he starting using drugs. "I just had a complete disconnect. I wasn't okay and I didn't know why. I found opiates and they did exactly what I needed them to do. It made me feel okay and not think about yesterday or tomorrow."

Growing up outside of Worcester, Ross was eventually placed in a sober house in Amherst. He tried to stick with their 12-step program but soon relapsed. Ultimately, he landed at the Ocean House.

"They hold you accountable for the way you live and what you do but also, help you to integrate back into society," Ross explained. "They allow you to work and hang out with your friends but they also check up on you to make sure you're living an honest life."

Ross is enthusiastic about his recent success and the progression he is making through the 12-step program. Part of the Ocean House's mission statement reads, "the goal is to provide residents an opportunity to experience a change and learn how to live in a healthy manner."

Ross seems to be on a path to attain that goal. He is working a construction job, has reunited with family members who previously, held him at "arm's length," and has developed a routine that most people take for granted.

"I wake up every day and I pray and meditate," shared Ross. "And then, if it's Monday through Friday, I go to work. Routine is a huge part of succeeding in this."

Behind Ross, the road race is off and running. Walking the course is Wilmington's Mark Brady, whose son Tim was claimed by addiction last year.

"I think this is an important event - people like Renee bring attention to it," he said after completing the 3.1-mile walk. "It's about time something is happening to put a stop to this addiction problem. These are kids from good families, brought up correctly. And yet, they still get involved in drugs. We have to get rid of the stigma."
